A Single Contact Point for Customized Projects

A home is not only a solid structure, but also a promise of serenity. Likewise, an office is not only a practical space, but also an idea of wellbeing.

This is the philosophy that has guided Giuseppe Taramelli since 1991. Today, the company he runs has a single-minded goal: make sure every customer can live his or her dreams. He is supported by a highly competent team that has the expertise to oversee every project stage, including drafting the construction details, installing structures and creating customized furnishings. Each project is tackled using the same approach in which the engineering and construction sides are in constant dialogue. The resultant synergies are fundamental to guaranteeing the highest quality standards and ensuring the required levels of durability, stability, safety, security and living comfort. Made in Italy is another core element for the company - an aspect that helps it stand out on the international market. Taking on international projects - in London, Monte Carlo and China - has driven Taramelli forward, improving both the organizational and project design sides of the business. The company operates in many sectors, such as residential, industrial, retail and business offices. Even the company's own office in Terno d'Isola is the work of the internal design team and represents a deliberate effort to express the different elements at the heart of the company. For this project, they completely redid the top floor of a retail building to form three meeting rooms, a small kitchen, a large open space and three individual offices over 400 sq. m. Adopting an elegant industrial mood, the choices of materials and finishings, using recovered materials from other building sites, exalt the pieces of art that display the company's history. The approach the company adopted to its own offices is identical to how it works with its clients and architects - a consultant and single partner regardless of the size of project and whether it is a new build or a refurbishment. The final aspects that make the company stand out are its care for details, the customization of design choices and the management of every stage at the building site.
